Creator of FireVault Pro

David Bannerman is a low-voltage systems professional with more than 40 years of technical field experience spanning alarm, security and related low-voltage technologies, with the past decade focused primarily on fire alarm service.

He created FireVault Pro from firsthand experience managing the notes, photos, documents, site locations and service history that technicians rely on every day.

The idea grew from a recurring problem in the field: valuable information was collected on every service call, but there was no simple way to keep it organized around the customer site and readily available when returning months or years later.

Bannerman built FireVault Pro to solve that problem for his own workday—and ultimately to give other fire alarm professionals a field tool designed around the way technicians actually work.

"After years of taking service notes, photos and site information, I wanted one place where the information would still be useful when I came back to that account. FireVault Pro grew out of solving that problem for my own workday."
